Brass pipe fittings can be made from different types of brass, including yellow brass and red brass. Yellow brass is an alloy of copper and zinc and is the most common type of brass used for fittings. It has a bright, yellowish color and is commonly used in plumbing applications.

Red brass, on the other hand, is an alloy of copper and a higher percentage of zinc compared to yellow brass, along with a small amount of tin. It has a reddish color and is sometimes referred to as "red brass" or "bronze." Red brass is often used for fittings that require higher strength and corrosion resistance.

In general, most brass pipe fittings used in plumbing applications are made from yellow brass due to its cost-effectiveness and suitability for a wide range of applications. However, red brass fittings may be used in specific cases where higher strength or corrosion resistance is required.
